

ILiADS

Institute for Liberal Arts Digital Scholarship

July 30 - Aug 4, 2017

WHO WE ARE

ILiADS is a week-long summer institute where participants develop digital projects in teams of faculty, students, librarians, and technologists. At ILiADS, ideas grow through collaborative, iterative processes. During this week of immersion, teams build upon established digital pedagogy or scholarship projects and/or launch new ones. Teams have access to our pool of ILiADS liaisons who provide training and guidance on digital scholarship technologies and methods.

We prioritize student contributions to digital scholarship. We are proud to be the birthplace of the Undergraduate Network for Research in the Humanities (UNRH.org), an organization run by students, for students.

By sponsoring ILiADS, you are supporting a community of practice that values the voices of all its contributors. Through projects, conversations, and scholarship, participants explore what it means to be human in the digital age. Your contribution will help seed innovation in liberal arts institutions and their future graduates.
